

On January 1st 2000 I began a process of deep listening which opened the door to an amazing journey of self-discovery. My goal at the time was to find inner peace, fulfillment and escape from the debilitating intensity of a high-stress job. Looking back I realize my unconscious agenda was to shift my reality from "work life" to "life work" by figuring out how to identify and align with my passion, gifts and talents.

The journey led me to create my consulting practice, Jackie Levin & The Power of Possibility, the context for my life dream of creating and guiding self-discovery experiences that move people to do what they love every day. In the process I identified possibility thinking, deep process and inspired art and writing as the essence of my own core passions.

By the winter of 2003 my repertoire of resource tools was beginning to take form and I had experienced great success on a small scale sharing my flagship tool, The Passion Profile, with friends and referrals. My goal at that point was to expand my client base and continue developing more tools and strategies. The signs I was receiving at many levels suggested I was at the brink of a major transition.

Late spring 2003 that transition occurred and I was faced with a series of serious life challenges. Over the course of the next three months I took care of my mother in hospice, said our final goodbyes, received my own diagnosis of ovarian cancer and began chemotherapy treatment. My focus quickly shifted to self-healing and I found myself accessing greater depths of inner wisdom as I continued to apply the principles of possibility process on a daily basis. My commitment to healing and life balance paid off as I survived to continue my life work.

Fast forward to 2018, I received an e-mail from Chere Bork, a life coach colleague and friend, looking for tools like the Passion Profile, which she had experienced and valued in 2004. I took Chere's contact as a sign and a call to revisit the Passion Profile so I might integrate all of my learning over the past 15 years into an updated edition.

I am excited about the result, BRING YOUR PASSIONS TO LIFE, and look forward to your engagement with this unique self-discovery tool.

With gratitude for the opportunity to support your life dream,

Jackie Levin
